MUST USE BRICK

Washington Sends Moran a Sad Word About Post Office Annex

An Associated Press despatch from Washington says:

"Representative Moran was notified Wednesday by officials of the procurement division that, inasmuch as the lowest bid for the Rockland Post-office extension was higher than the allotted amount, the rear wall, instead of being constructed of granite, must, where it adjoins another building be built of brick."

"For the Rockland extension $50,000 was appropriated of which $38,410 was available for the building. The lowest bid for construction with the facing of the rear wall like the rest of the building of granite, was $44,112. "By omitting granite on that part of the rear wall abutting an adjoining building and constructing it of brick, the building can be built for $42,000. Addition of the 10 percent allowed for contingencies will make it possible to construct it in that manner."

AN ADVENTUROUS CAREER

Everett Colson, Native Of Warren, Financial Adviser To War Threatened Abyssinia

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

Because of the grave concern of the whole world over the impending Abyssinian-Italian crisis it may interest Knox County readers to know that in September, 1930, Everett Colson, a native of Warren, became financial adviser to Emperor Haile Selassie of Abyssinia or Ethiopia, as its own people call it.

Everett was born in Warren Feb. 27, 1885, the son of David and Mary (Andrews) Colson. At the age of 19 he went to the Philippine Islands as a government stenographer. After a short service as United States marshal in Canton, China, he returned to the "States" for a while, but was asked to return to the "Islands" as Director of the United States Civil Service. During the World War he was in France for a time and also gave 11 years of service in Haiti.

When I last heard of him, about a year ago, he was still in Ethiopia, so I presume he is there now, advising an emperor who must be sorely in need of advice as Mussolini proceeds to carry out his warlike threats.

Knox County Men Figure In Two Interesting Committee Hearings—Milk Bill

Maine boatbuilders and repairers told the legislative committee on taxation Wednesday a tax on boats owned by non-residents would kill storage and repair business in Maine.

Alan L. Bird of Rockland, president of the Maine Boat-builders and Repairers Association, said passage of a bill providing for local assessment of taxes on boats on which ten percent of the value had not been spent for repairs would result in owners taking their storage, outfitting and repair business elsewhere. A. M. Main of the Bath Iron Works said the NRA code permitted owners to do their own repairs on laid-up boats, and the cost so would be kept down in many instances on smaller boats.

Representatives of the Camden assessors appeared to support the bill. Opponents included Herbert H. Payson, Jr., of Portland, Sidney Norton of Islesboro, and E. E. Pinson of Bath, all operators of boat yards. Bird suggested legislation for exemption of stored boats from tax assessment.

Dwinal In Sharp Debate
Zelma M. Dwinal of Camden, representing a large group of fire insurance companies, told the Mercantile Affairs and Insurance Committee "Maine cannot afford to stop buying fire insurance" as proposed in two bills heard by the committee. He said that if the State carried no fire insurance and any one of its large buildings burned, the tax rate would have to be raised to replace it.

One of the bills provided that the State set aside $37,500 annually until a fund of $300,000 was raised, to be used to pay fire losses. The other would simply prohibit the State from buying fire insurance. Both were introduced by Senator Fernald of Waldo.

Fernald said that since June 1, 1931, the state "paid $208,243 in fire insurance premiums and got back $16,422."

"Why perpetuate this racket at the expense of the taxpayers? Many large companies and a number of states have their own insurance funds."

Senator Elroy Hussey of Kennebec, chairman of the committee, remarked "There is no law that says the state must buy insurance."

Fernald said: "Yes, that's right, but to get the Governor and Council to stop this practice it would be like tearing a three-months-old baby from its mother. They have a racket with their distribution of eight key policies. That makes one for each."

Dwinal said that even if a fund were established there could be no assurance "it would be there when needed." It might be used for other purposes, Dwinal said, "as has been done with other funds."

Fire insurance on the State House and its contents amounted to about $1,850,000, Dwinal said, while that on

ROOSEVELT THE MAN IN DANGER

Lincoln Colcord, Democrat, So Told Rotarians —"Does Not Possess Economic Mind"

Charging that President Roosevelt does not possess an economic mind; that he does not realize what makes the world go on; and that millions of dollars are going to be handed out to the politicians, Lincoln Colcord of Searsport yesterday presented before the Rockland Rotary Club an array of logic that amazed even its most careful thinkers.

The world knows Lincoln Colcord as an author of note. Generally speaking it don't know that he is a rock-ribbed Democrat, and one of the four men sent out of Washington to obtain an early analysis on the workings of the NRA. In view of these facts his frank arraignment of the administration, yesterday, did not leave itself open to the charge of being a political attack.

Mr. Colcord spoke calmly and deliberately and his words never contained even the remotest suggestion of political bias. He referred in his introduction to the fact that he was speaking in the home city of Congressman Moran whom he supported most diligently; and added that he sincerely felt the country needed a change. He frankly admitted that he believed in sticking to his party, though he did not believe in following party leadership when he believed its course was not sound.

The NRA has worked out to disadvantage, Mr. Colcord told his hearers. The speaker told of going to the Detroit area to learn that section's opinion between economic progress on the left and the right, and he found a common conclusion that the Administration's relief policy was based on the wrong idea; that the humanitarian approach had been stressed at the expense of the economic.

The figures involved were amazing. More than 25 per cent of the population had been on public relief, and new conceptions had grown up. The people were looking toward Washington for relief, as their right. It approaches the Socialist conception, but the people themselves do not realize it. The relief program has been going in both directions at once—and getting nowhere. The country has got to turn to communism or get back to the capitalist conception of society. And it looks, the speaker

Create Milk Price
The Maine Legislature Wednesday enacted an emergency bill to create a milk price and distribution control board. It became law when Governor Brann signed the measure immediately afterwards. The bill provided for appointment by the Governor of a board to consist of two milk producers, a dealer and a producer-dealer, with the State Agriculture Commissioner, Frank P. Washburn, an ex-officio member.

The board was restricted from exercising its powers in any market except upon written application of producers, dealers or producer-dealers' associations supplying a substantial proportion of the milk consumed in such market.

Manufacture of automobile registration plates and similar markers in the State prison was urged yesterday before the Committee on State Prisons. Warden Thurston told the committee necessary equipment which would be bought second-hand would cost approximately $8500 installed.

Thurston also spoke in favor of measures providing for paying State prisoners up to 15 cents daily for work at the discretion of the warden, and for detention of female State prisoners at the reformatory for women at Skowhegan rather than at the Thomaston State prison.

Compensation for working inmates was urged by the warden as a "benefit in the moral effect" on prisoners.

THREE-TIMES-A-WEEK

For the Lord is our Judge, the Lord is our lawgiver, the Lord is our king; he will save us.—Isaiah 32:22.

NOTICING

Have any of this paper's readers, gifted with the noticing faculty, noticed—

THAT what with the airplane, the motor car, the active saloon with its opposed bootlegging and the merry gangster, taking each a daily toll of unprotected citizenry, you discharge your mind of all anxiety that our country should ever come to suffer from over-population.

THAT the young person who in scant bathing raiment lightly hinting at coverage treads the thronged city streets with calm repudiation of public opinion, discovers herself in a paroxysm of alarm if by unhappy chance a corner of the window curtain falls loose during the garmented ceremony that anticipates night's gentle slumber.

THAT if endowed with the contemplative turn of mind, you find yourself often considering the probabilities associated with the motor car as to when, like little orphan Annie's gobs, it is ordained, sooner or later, to "get you if you don't watch out."

THAT unhappily there are too many of us so inexorably fettered by tradition as to feel that we are ourselves a sneaking feeling of an obligation transgressed because we came away without leaving a tip for the waiter.

THAT the providence which is popularly understood to exercise a particular wisdom in mankind's affairs seemed a bit wanting in sapience when it assigned to the adjoining room the gentleman whose facility in the art of midnight snoring has been developed to a lengthened capacity.

THAT if the late Oliver Goldsmith could have observed his lovely woman stooping to folly through the process of touching off her cigarette when the meal was not half completed, his famous poem might easily have been lengthened by yet another melancholy stanza.

THAT it was the gentleman of circular dimensions who let himself gingerly down into the adjoining chair and under the soft splendor of the Miami moon opened upon you the abstruse subject of family descent; in the unfolding of whose complicated details he got his ancestors ashore with wet feet on Plymouth Rock, from whence point of vantage he pursued their complicated maneuvers down to the present moment, which found him triumphing as the last in line—an up to date Ancient Mariner with long grey beard and glittering eye holding you till far beyond the hour of sleep, and alluding to his subject, as much people do, under the designation of genealogy, with no consideration whatever for the personal feelings of the word as embalmed in the dictionary.

THAT today one does not so frequently encounter the tourist whose practice it once seemed to be to adventure around the world for no ostensible reason other than to have his formidable luggage pasted over to the full limits of coverage with loud colored labels set off with undecipherable auxiliaries of foreign speech.

THAT when you have seemingly attended much upon these vacation time evening concerts, listening to the programs in which the thinly clad soprano presents her group of songs that deal chiefly with the much heard of topic of love and end upon a violently uplifted C-sharp sustained until the singer's voice gives out—then, sez you in to yourself, would that it might be given to you the hands of time set themselves backward to the end that you should listen once more to Jimmy McNamara there upon the stage, with his rich Irish voice and true to pitch, unfolding again to his explosive audience in front the impressive details of what took place at "The Party at Odd Fellows Hall."

THAT if out of the deep explorings of your intellect you had at the last of it received illumination as to whether, upon the whole, you favored the gold standard, or not, as the case might be, and therefore if so what about it, if at all or even more, you can the better evaluate the conclusions which the Supreme Court, following severe and protracted consideration thereof, or at least thinking about it, or elsewhere discovering itself arrived at and leaving you to your vast surprise, in precisely the same mental condition as when you first seriously addressed yourself to looking into the matter.

THE GARDEN CLUB

Ensign Otis Tells of His Gladioli—Other Speakers Are Heard

Mrs. Frank W. Fuller opened her home Tuesday afternoon for the meeting of the Garden Club. Mrs. Leola Wiggin, president, announced this committee to take charge of the beautification of the Public Landing grounds: Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Southard, Mr. and Mrs. John O. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Vesper Packard, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Emery. Mrs. Wiggin also referred to the annual Boston flower show which opens in Horticultural Hall March 25. The regular price of admission tickets is to be $1, but to all garden club members who procure tickets through their respective garden clubs, the price will be 75 cents with the cost of the 11th ticket going to that club. These tickets may be procured through Mrs. Wiggin and must be purchased prior to March 23.

A plant sale to be held in May was announced the proceeds to be used for Knox Hospital garden. It was also suggested that a committee be appointed to be known as the surplus flower committee, to receive seedlings, or any surplus bulbs, shrubs, etc., to be used in garden club work. An announcement was made that Miss Rosamund Graham of Camden has received the support of local service clubs in connection with the tent caterpillar menace, the proposal to be that school children gather the caterpillars at a penny for so many. The club donated $10 for this work.

Speakers were Ensign Otis who told of the care and his experience in growing gladioli for which he has won no small fame; Mrs. Clara Emery, another successful gladioli grower, who gave the names of the most popular bulbs; Mrs. Somes of Waldoboro who gave a fascinating account of making a garden pool and of the things placed in it; Mrs. George Avery who told of her experience in growing asters and button zinnias; and Dr. John Smith Lowe who gave a brief account of his summer home at Round Pond and his experiences in gardening there.

The meeting next month will be an evening one March 18.

STAND ON OWN FEET

The Government Hatches Further Plans For Maine Fishermen

Completed plans for launching the Maine Coast Fisheries, all commercial organization, standing on its own feet in the fisheries business, were given Representative Moran Thursday by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

The Maine Coast Fisheries is a fisheries co-operative, organized under act of the previous Congress, permitting fishermen to organize as farmers do. The bill was aided through Congress by Representative Moran, formerly member of the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. In the last Congress, also, fisheries industries and co-operatives were made eligible to borrow from RFC.

The Maine Coast Fisheries has been in the past a child of FERA. It got its money from the Fishermen's Relief Corporation, set up by the Maine ERA, the co-operative was under the control and management of the Relief Corporation and ERA and prevented from putting its fish into commercial channels in free competition, and from sending it outside the State.

Also, the relationship between relief and the co-operative has been cause for controversy and complaint from commercial fish dealers. The new plan gets the co-operative away from the grip of the relief organization.

Under the present plan the co-operative sets up its own household. Its relationship with the relief corporation is simply that of debtor to creditor—the co-operative still owes the relief corporation money which will be paid off out of future earnings. The co-operative has enough money left out of the original loan to start going. With the divorce of the co-operative from the Fishermen's Relief Corporation, Rufus Stone, ERA man who has been managing the co-operative, steps out of the co-operative picture, though of course he remains managing director of the relief corporation.

Under the amended charter of the co-operative it will have a board of five directors of whom two, George Beals of Jonesport and C. D. Wallace of Cutler, have been chosen. Active management, under the board, will be in the hands of C. Olcott of Boston, a marketing expert. Members of the co-operative will have voting rights, which they did not have while under the tutelage of ERA.

There remain legal details of the transition to be settled.

Our second hand furniture department will satisfy your every furniture need at a mere fraction of the cost of new. See us. Studley Furniture Co., Rockland.

KATHARINE HEPBURN, as the supposed gypsy in "THE LITTLE MINISTER," amazes John Beal, as Gavin, by showing a diamond ring as evidence that she can provide for poor old Nanny. Donald Crisp, as Dr. McQueen, is equally puzzled.

Katharine Hepburn in "The Little Minister," by Sir James M. Barrie! The films' outstanding young star, in the most famous and popular romance ever penned by the great Scottish author! This brilliant combination of names and talents brings one of the most vivid and colorful love stories ever written to the screen. "The Little Minister" gives Miss Hepburn another great character that is beloved by millions all over the world.

Nothing has been spared in the effort to make "The Little Minister" an unforgettable experience in entertainment.

Miss Hepburn and Beal play the immortal romance, first performed in the theatre by Maude Adams and the late Robert Edson, against the background of the tiny Scotch village of Thrums, and the hamlet's loves and hates, joys and sorrows and laughter form a colorful and thrilling plot for the story—adv.

A ROADSIDE SURVEY

Our State, Which Seeks To Attract Tourists, Is Praised and Criticized

The current Roadside Bulletin of the National Council for the Protection of Roadside Beauty will be read eagerly by all New England, and particularly by the people of Maine, for it contains the full report of the Maine survey just completed by Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Lawton of the National Council.

The necessity for protecting Maine's countryside from unregulated commercialism is stressed. Practical methods of arousing our people to the realization of the marvelous asset of natural beauty which we possess are outlined.

The Maine State program of roadside development has already attracted attention. The Federal work between Ellsworth and Bar Harbor is outstanding. The roadside tests which have been developed by the Western Maine Association for Roadside Improvement are only the beginning of similar tests which the State Highway Department hopes to complete. Maine has passed a law making automobile dumps a nuisance, and the Federations of Garden and Women's Clubs hope to see an improvement along these lines.

But the report is not all praise, for there is more than one word of warning. The filling stations must be improved, the hot dog stands regulated, and the billboard blight subdued, or the natural beauty of the State will be despoiled; for as traffic increases, roads that now are attractive will be slum boulevards, as the once beautiful but now in many places tragically marred Boston Post Road.

These facts explain the widespread public interest in the present bill for the control and regulation of highway advertising. Several bills in the past have been favorably acted on by the House, only to be killed by the billboard industry opposition and lobby.

The Survey points out that Maine's rural highways are unprotected, and we are slow in our highway planning and design due to the small amount of money available in such work.

In making their Survey, Mr. and Mrs. Lawton motored over 3,500 miles of Maine highway, spoke at 29 meetings, including 14 Rotary Clubs, took innumerable photographs, many of which are being shown by means of lantern slides which are in great demand all over the State. The Federated Garden Clubs under the able leadership of Dr. Charles J. Bragdon of Gardiner sponsored the survey, which for the first time gives a comprehensive view of existing highway conditions and shows what must be done to put Maine in line to protect the beauty of her countryside and to attract the tourist in ever increasing numbers to the beauty of the Pine Tree state.

Between acts the ushers hastened to the front of the stage, arms filled with "floral" offerings for some of the stars. Those bestowed upon the men were entirely practical, being composed mainly of specimens from the vegetable gardens—cabbagins, carrots, spinach, etc. etc. But for Miss Cross there was a beautiful bouquet of bona fide flowers.

HAD WATER DAMAGE

Blown Off Connection Sends
 Flood In Vesper A. Leach
 Block on Main Street

When Carroll Wikson, assistant at the Vesper A. Leach Specialty Store, opened up this morning his astonished eyes beheld water falling in streams from the central section of the ceiling. He rushed to the cellar and shut off the water supply to the upper floors and then ran across the street to Central Fire Station for help.

The regular men from the station were promptly on the scene, removing goods from the danger zone and were joined by Raphael S. Sherman, with the result that further spread of damage was averted.

Luckily only the middle section of the store was affected, the front, rear and the annex being entirely clear. The coat, suit and dress departments were not involved. Mr. Leach was unable to place his loss this morning, though it will be several hundred dollars. Damage to the building will be small due to the steel ceiling.

Investigation disclosed the cause to be a blown off supply pipe connection to a toilet on the second floor.

IN THE CHURCHES

SERMONETTE

Saul of Tarsus

Many a man has cried in his distress as did Saul, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" But not often does the Lord answer directly, "Arise and it shall be told thee what thou must do." It is easier to be commissioned than to retain faith when you know not the way. They led him into Damascus and for three days he was without sight, food or drink. In this city dwelt Ananias. In a dream the Lord called out, "Ananias!" and he answered "Behold I am here." And as he said to Saul he said to Ananias, "Arise, go into the street called Straight, enquire at the home of Judas for Saul of Tarsus; for behold he prayeth and hath a vision of you. Ananias, putting your hand on him that he might receive his sight." But Ananias objected. I have heard of this man, the evil he has done to thy saints, and even now he hath papers from the chief priests to bind all who call upon thy name.

But the Lord said, go, "for he is a chosen vessel unto me to bear my name before the Gentiles and kings and the children of Israel; for I will show him how great things he must suffer for my name sake."

When God calls a man to a great place it is never by an easy road but through suffering, humiliation and the valley of shadows. Saul to be told, Ananias to be imperiled, but God's purpose to be fulfilled and the Gentile world to be saved.

"Behold I am here, Lord."
 William A. Holman.

TREATISE ON GRIPPE

The gripple germ is an elusive and cowardly imp. It sneaks into one's house like a burglar, uninvited and unobserved—a pestilence indeed, that walketh in darkness. It hides away, first in one corner and then another. On being driven from one spot, it secretes itself elsewhere—an imp that must be watched.

Whence comes this imp? Cpl Lindbergh suggests perhaps the right answer when he announced that disease germs are carried upon the upper layers of atmosphere. This means that when nations and peoples slaughter one another in vast numbers, when floods and famine lay waste millions, germs from these infected areas are lifted and swept over the earth to take their judgment

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

CLOUD PICTURES

Clouds add much to the beauty of the sky. Include them in every picture. It's easy to do.

It seems that too often we forget all about the fleecy white clouds, which add so much to the attractiveness and beauty of a snapshot. The average amateur will put forth great effort to secure sharpness, contrast and good composition in his ground subject and then completely overlook the possibilities of beautiful cloud effects.

One thing that really adds to the interest in a landscape picture is clouds. Suppose we are taking such a picture and use a film which responds only to ultra-violet, violet, and blue light. We should not be able to distinguish between the clouds and sky if we give enough exposure to show detail in the landscape. This is because the light from the blue sky and the white clouds is very rich in light rays to which the film responds.

Although clouds and blue sky are both rich in ultra-violet, violet and blue, there is a marked difference between the two. The light from the clouds, being white, actually contain, however, a lot of green and red light, while that from the blue sky does not.

This, then, suggests a way to effectively show clouds and sky in a snapshot. We must use a film which will respond to green, or to green and red light, and put over the lens a filter which does not let through the ultra-violet, violet and blue. The green or green and red light from the clouds will thus affect the film, while practically no light from the sky will get through to it, and in the finished print, the clouds will appear whiter than the sky.

Some film is sensitive to green light only but super-sensitive panchromatic film will respond to both green and red light. All these films will, therefore, show up the clouds against the sky if used with a yellow filter.

From time to time you have perhaps heard of "filter factors." Here's what it means. Since the filter cuts out some of the light which would otherwise affect the film, a longer exposure must be given. The amount by which the exposure must be increased is known as the "factor" of the filter. It is noted by the number of times the exposure must be increased when using a color filter, as compared with the exposure without one.

The deeper the yellow color in the filter the more violet and blue it removes, or "holds back." The greater the "factor" the more the exposure must be increased.

As you will no doubt surmise, there are various types of filters and each type has its limitations. In choosing a filter you must make your own decision based on your general requirements.

If you do not want to seriously consider filter "factors" there is a filter known as a Sky Filter used extensively by amateurs to photograph clouds in a landscape with no increase in exposure time. Half of this filter is yellow and the other half clear. This filter can be used without increasing the exposure because the sky is photographed through the yellow part while the landscape, or general subject is photographed through the lower half, which is not colored. Yes, you can even get clouds with a silver lining.

CASCADE BOWLERS

Eats and Cartoons Furnish Merry Evening For the Island Bowlers

At about 6.30 p. m. Wednesday night pedestrians traveling the town highway in the vicinity of Captain David Kent's restaurant heard strange sounds that resembled the sound of some liquid substance running down a drain pipe alternating with other sounds like a steam boiler blowing off. These were followed by a queer popping noise that reminded them somewhat of popping corn, the whole being interspersed with much loud talk and louder laughter. The alarm of these good citizens quickly subsided when it was discovered that it was only the B. M. bowling teams consuming that long anticipated "feed" and that the strange popping was but the sound of the buttons as they let go under the internal strain.

During the progress of the meal, a presentation was made by Postmaster O. V. Drew of three striking cartoons drawn from life by that gifted local artist Sidney Winslow, representing three members of the Ganders as they appear in action on the alleys. Leon Sanborn, Scottie Littlefield and the "Goose" himself were the objects of the artistic endeavor and they all joined in on the merry chorus of laughter that the cartoons provoked.

The guests were "Dick" Poole, who has scored most of the matches; and substitute "Uncle" Harry Young, who has been used by both sides impartially, when some regular player was unable to be on hand. When the saturation point (which varied from half a bowl of stew in Bruce Grindle's case to four and one-half bowls and three pieces of pie in Capt. Leon Arey's case) had been reached, all hands adjourned to the Cascade Alleys where the regular Wednesday night battle on the alleys was begun. From the first it was evident that certain players were laboring under some strange and fatal handicap, and it was not until the match was nearly over that Gene Hall made the strange gastronomic discovery that the size of each man's score was in direct proportion to the amount of scallop stew that he had taken in for ballast, at the supper. Those of you who are mathematically minded will be able to tell each player's tank capacity by the box score below. As Gene expressed it, those fellows who were good consumers had something to lean on while they bowled.

The Skippers were out to even up the series and they took all three strings without a hitch, winning by 52 pins and bowling quite a bit better than their average. "Skip" Arey was head man, closely followed by the Goose and Drew. Scottie Littlefield in the first two strings acquired a good solid lead over his friendly enemy Gene Hall, but in the last string Gene managed, with the aid of his "jump" ball and his "kick," to gain everything back but four pins. Bruce Grindle had a terrible night. The harder he would try the fewer pins he got, and the fewer he got the harder he would try. He just couldn't seem to "unlax" and being partly undernourished, too, it was more than the poor fellow could bear under.

Following is the table of weights and measures:

Ganders—L. Arey 291, Grimes 214, Sanborn 279, Grindle 231, Littlefield 237, totals 1282.

Skippers—Drew 289, Dyer 254, Skip Arey 297, Peterson 261, Hall 233, totals 1324.

NORTH HAVEN

Mrs. W. D. Paton and Mrs. W. J. Moore, formerly of this town, now of Cheshire, Conn., were in Rockland Wednesday to visit their aunt Mrs. Elizabeth Gillis who is ill at the home of Mrs. A. B. Cooper. Miss Alice Webster of Bridgeport, Conn., visited with Mrs. Gillis last week.

The Kickapoo, with Capt. Kent aboard, steamed Monday into the Thoroughfare from the west. It cleared the western channel of ice and also the area near the wharf. At night, with a Coast Guard boat alongside, it anchored in the Thoroughfare, and the two boats lighted made a beautiful sight in the field of ice and snow. With the North Haven following in her wake the Kickapoo went east Tuesday morning, returned in the afternoon and made a trip to Rockland.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Gregory are visiting their son Harland Gregory for two weeks.

John Crockett was a visitor in Rockland Tuesday, returning the following day.

The thermometer early Thursday morning registered 5 above zero.

Town meeting will be held Monday. Civic affairs are important and should have the earnest and public-spirited interest of every citizen.

Mr. and Mrs. Harland Gregory and family have moved to the Paton Dyer house.

In answering a call Tuesday morning, Dr. Woodman could get only as far as the high school. It required some time to clear the drifts, allowing him to proceed.

The boat arrived Thursday direct from Rockland, its return trip being made by way of Vinhaven. The mail goes overland at noon.

Services Sunday will be as usual; Church school at 10; worship with sermon by the pastor at 11; singing by the young ladies' choir; Lord's Supper at the close of the morning service. It being the first Sunday in the month, the young people have charge at 7.30; singing by the adult choir.

EYES + LIGHT = SIGHT

His Eye Tasks Were Easy

The cave man who played hide-and-seek with dinosaurs and other prehistoric animals had at least one advantage over most of us living today. Insofar as he can be learned, his eyes usually remained keen and clear until a ripe old age. Perhaps that is because he did no reading or other close eye work.

Modern man, with his books, newspapers, and desk work, pays a severe penalty for the hard use which modern civilization demands of his eyes. Statistics show that of all people past fifty, more than three-fourths suffer from defective vision.

The observance of three simple rules will do much to prevent abuse of the eyes. The first is to refuse to read fine print or look at small objects for long periods at a time. The second is to have the eyes examined regularly by a competent eyesight specialist. The third is to make sure that there is ample lighting wherever close eye-work is done. Then we will at least compensate in some measure for the burdens imposed by our present-day civilization.

ENGLAND MAY MAKE DIVORCE DIFFICULT

Judges Act to Stop Manufactured Evidence.

London.—Divorce may be harder to obtain in Britain in the near future.

Plans are being prepared to put a stop to what is called "hotel evidence."

The authorities say that there are too many "arranged" divorces, in which the husband "acts the gentleman" and manufactures evidence by staying one night in a hotel with an unknown woman and then sends the bill to his wife so that she may have the necessary circumstantial evidence of adultery—the only grounds on which a divorce is granted in England at present.

Some judges have attempted to frustrate this type of collusion by demanding the name of the co-respondent. Others have threatened to disregard "hotel evidence" altogether. Neither method has proved practical.

Now the authorities visualize some plan whereby the unsupported evidence of hotel witnesses—such as the manager, the reception clerk and the chambermaids—will be insufficient if there is any doubt about the bona fides of the petitioner. In such cases the name of the co-respondent will have to be given, or the failure to do so satisfactorily explained.

This will mean the disappearance of the "unknown woman" in divorce, and with it the breakup of the profitable and highly organized business of agent.

The agents for substantial fees, "arrange" divorces and manufacture evidence. They enlist the service of professional co-respondents, who make a big income by being party to the preparation of suitable divorce evidence.

There are offices in London where a man may go and discreetly hire a personable young woman as his companion for the week-end to aid the divorce plan.

Installs Radio in Barn;

Aids in Milking Cows

Kansas City, Mo.—George H. Twelhaus, Jackson county farmer, has led the way in a new deal for bovines by installing a radio in his barn.

"If music 'hath charms to soothe the savage beast,'" mused Twelhaus, "why not for the dairy cow?"

Now milking time in the Twelhaus dairy barn is melody time. Streams of milk flow musically into the pails to the accompaniment of orchestral strains via the ether. If milking lags a bit to the tune of a slow, melancholy air, Farmer Twelhaus has but to turn the dial a bit to a more sprightly and moving tune.

Instantly the milking tempo moves up, and buckets fill faster. Cows that formerly were irritable at times, even kicking over the bucket, have been soothed to contentment by the radio music. They munch their feed placidly. They even chew their cud with an air of more enjoyment, Twelhaus reports.

Hot Wine Craze Strikes

Paris Boulevard Cafes

Paris.—Warm Bordeaux or burgundy, served with a whiff of cinnamon, now is discovered to be the best cure for colds, influenza and other ills. Cafes along the grand boulevards are the first to discover that there is money in hot wines as a popular drink.

It is advocated for babies and grandmothers, and since Parisians insist upon sitting on outdoor terraces even during the cold months, the hot-wine vogue is proving a popular one.

Calculating proprietors of cafes say that the hot-wine fad should reduce the amount of coal they must buy to stoke the stoves which are used to supply a modicum of heat on the open terraces.

Copper Awnings, New Use for Old Metal

FROM the days of the early Egyptians down through the ages, awnings have been used by man as a protection against the penetrating heat of the sun. In the past, fabrics have been the material used. Within a short time a new awning is to make its appearance on the market. It is made of copper, oldest of the metals of commerce.

The new copper awning folds like a Venetian blind. Because copper cannot rust these new awnings can be used both winter and summer. Neither rain, snow, sleet or sunshine can affect this age-old metal.

Many fires are caused by careless persons throwing lighted cigars or cigarettes out of windows on fabric awnings. The loss to property owners has in many instances been very large. The use of copper awnings will prevent such fire hazards.

NEW SAFETY FIRST FLASHLIGHT GRIPS THE STEERING POST

HIGH up in the list of safety hints for this year's car owner is one that is more than a hint. It has to do with flashlights, and its emphasis is due to the heavy list of injuries and fatalities in 1934 that never would have occurred if a safe, efficient means of illumination had been at hand.

When a car becomes disabled on a dark road, and the lighting system is out of order; a flat tire—and darkness; a leaky carburetor at night or the gas line is out of order—then a flashlight is needed and needed quickly.

The trouble with an automobile flashlight is that it is usually either in the way or hidden away. At any rate, it is too often missing when wanted. Now a special automobile light has been devised which is always out of the way, yet within reach. A simple and inconspicuous clamp attaches the flashlight to the steering post in such a fashion that it cannot slip, rattle, or break. Safety and automobile experts see in it the answer to many of the accidents and deaths piled up last year by the mere lack of light in emergencies.

"YOU AND YOUR CAR"

Points of Personal Interest to Every Motorist
by
Frederick C. Russell
A National Motor Authority
(Copyrighted)

It takes a couple of youngsters in a modern roadster to prove that clutch control doesn't always work.

Leakage May Delay Start

Among the lesser known but common enough causes of starting failure in winter is leakage of anti-freeze around the connection of the hot water heater pipe at the piping from the motor to the radiator. Anti-freeze that works out at this point naturally is fanned back over the motor. This not only collects on tops of the spark plugs but gradually works down to the points of any that are not tight. With such an accumulation the motor will not start when cranking speed and ignition are not up to maximum efficiency.

Culled From New Models

Even the man who knows that he cannot afford a new car for 1935 is doing himself an injustice by not becoming familiar with the latest the market has to offer. Only by having a more intimate acquaintance with the detailed improvements is he able to cull ideas which he can apply profitably to his present equipment.

A perfect example is the new development in compression where ratios have been moved up considerably simply because of improvements in cooling. Any old timer knows that as his engine became hotter it knocked more. To check the detonation from unusually high compression some engineers hit upon the idea of designing an engine with exceptionally good cooling. This has been done in different ways, but generally through directing a stream of cooler water toward the exhaust valve seats and toward the rear cylinders. Such changes cannot easily be made in older cars but owners can take the tip to see that the cooling system is kept in the most efficient condition.

One of the latest developments in clutches ought to be a warning to owners of powerful, speedy cars manufactured during the past few years. By using special fly-weights that swing out as clutch speed increases the updates take a firmer grip. By this arrangement the amount of pressure needed to release the clutch is lessened while at the same time there is less possibility of slippage at higher speeds. If your present car has an easy acting clutch every effort should be made to favor it and to keep it in such good condition that it can be counted on to hold firmly at higher speeds, especially on hills.

Mechanic Joe Speaking

"So many changes have been made in the 1935 cars it is short-sighted policy to assume that familiarity with former models makes it unnecessary to learn more about the new job at the service station. Some of the latest cars carry entirely different front ends, braking systems and transmissions.

"One of our customers has been spraying oil all over the front springs on the theory that this would make the car ride easier. Of course he's just making matters complicated because the springs are fitted with special inerts that do the lubrication job accurately. I can't begin to tell you how many owners are using the wrong grade of lubricant in their new motors. Another customer has been going along without having the fan bearing greased—just because he still thinks the car is equipped with an oil-less bushing as in the case of the previous model."

Winter Risk At Sundown

At sundown in winter there is more than the danger of dusk to disturb the tranquility of the automobile driver. Especially dangerous is the added risk from sudden freezing of slush, silt or just small patches of water on the street paving. One moment the wet paving gives sufficient traction for a reasonably prompt stop; a few minutes later the wheel's slide and the car becomes unmanageable. Watch these unheralded dangers that lurk in the winter sunset. They may mean a collision or a fatality.

May Damage The Clutch

When he tried to get started the other evening a friend of mine stalled his engine several times before he discovered that the tires had frozen to the snowy road. By giving the motor more gas and by engaging the clutch a little more quickly he was able to free the tires and get under way, but in arriving at this answer to the problem he certainly did not favor the clutch. It would have been better had he first released the brakes and tried pushing the car to free the wheels.

Tells If Clutch Slips

If there is any suspicion that the clutch is slipping try the simple test of pulling up on the hand brake and engaging the clutch while the motor is running and the car is in gear. An efficient clutch will stall the motor instantly.

Idling Help To Brakes

It should be apparent that lowered engine efficiency will lessen the rapidity at which the booster cylinder of the vacuum assister braking system is exhausted. If the brakes are used frequently as in descending a hill and the motor is run fast there will be too little intake suction to keep the booster working efficiently. Idling is as effective in keeping modern brakes working at their best as it is in speeding up the windshield wiper. Many large trucks and busses carry an extra reserve vacuum tank to take care of downhill braking when driving conditions reduce intake suction.

Gears Delay the Start

Much difficulty in starting the motor in cold weather is due to failure to change the transmission grease to a much lighter grade. When the driver forgets to depress the clutch, in cranking, the starter motor then has to crank the gears as well as the engine.

Three Points On Braking

With an interconnected hand and foot brake you can set the hand lever further back by pressing on the brake pedal as you pull on the former. To help release the hand brake press on the brake pedal.

Where it is impossible to secure equalization of the front brakes, due to some fault in design, try one factory trick of using a narrower brake shoe on the side which is pulling.

After speeding uphill allow the car to run with the throttle closed before starting on the downgrade, if the car is equipped with a booster. This gives assurance that the cylinder of the assister is fully exhausted and ready for work.

What Owners Are Asking:

Q. Whenever the weather is severely cold I cannot start the motor of my car. I do not think this is due to the oil or to the electrical system because when such failure occurs the starter-motor simply does not operate. I have tested the car to make sure that the trouble is not due to the starter gears jammed.

AIRSTREAM NOW DE SOTO TWIN

The recently announced Airstream De Soto is now a companion car to the Airflow. The smart new Airstream looks big and is big—having a wheelbase of 116 inches. Some idea of its flowing lines may be gained from the picture above. The Airstream is powered by a 93 horsepower advanced six cylinder motor.

Smarter and more luxurious than ever, the Airflow De Soto for 1935 has a new front end. The radiator has been completely restyled, rounded and lengthened. These changes give the car an added beauty of line. The 1935 Airflow De Soto engine develops 100 horsepower.

with a loose connection in the starter motor. Whenever the motor is under a heavy load the tendency is for the wires of any loose connection to separate as far as they can. You will probably find the loose connection at one of the brushes.

Q. Does it do any harm to connect a booster or charger to the battery without disconnecting the battery connections? I have used a charger for a number of years, but have always disconnected the terminals from the battery. R. E.

A. It is not necessary to disconnect the battery terminals. Be sure to look at the ammeter when switching off the motor at night to make sure the relay or cut-out points have not stuck shut.

Q. When the motor is cold pressure is high but as it warms up the pressure drops to a very low point. Have tightened the bearings and put a new spring behind the plunger of the pressure regulator. The oil filter has also been renewed. A. H.

A. Probably the pump needs to be replaced. Be sure to replace both the gears and the pump body.

A feature in the execution of an order for 5,000 army trucks awarded to Dodge Brothers Corporation by the government is a series of rigid army-service tests; in one of these the trucks are made to run up and down

SLOW-MOTION CAMERA PROVES AIRFLOW WORTH

A CHRYSLER AIRFLOW . . . NO TURBULENCE

A very practical demonstration of the manner in which the Airflow design eliminates "wind-drag" or suction, one of the biggest factors in wasting power and fuel in a car of ordinary design, features a motion picture prepared by Chrysler for its dealers. This picture shows in slow-motion how a column of smoke intentionally generated in the engine and sent out through the exhaust flows smoothly away from the contour of the Airflow car. The air currents meet

EXCESSIVE TURBULENCE WITH CONVENTIONAL REAR END

Following the slow-motion demonstration of the effect of an Airflow car on air currents, this same car is converted into an approximation of one having a conventional rear end by raising a hinged backboard so that the rear end contour is practically vertical as in a conventional Sedan body. When this is done, the smoke is highly turbulent, following the car in a manner to prove the high suction created. It is evident that in overcoming this air turbulence, wind-drag or whatever one chooses to call it, the car of conventional design must consume a lot of power.

Moody Bible Students Volunteer To Replace Slain Missionaries

Accepting the slaying of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Stam by communists in China as a challenge to Christianity, approximately 40 men and women students of the Moody Bible Institute, dedicated themselves to missionary service in China. Twenty-one of the volunteers are shown in this photograph.

CHICAGO—In a stirring demonstration of militant Christianity, approximately 40 men and women answered the call of Dr. Will H. Houghton, president of the Moody Bible Institute here, for volunteers to take the places of Mr. and Mrs. John Stam, recently slain by communists in China.

In memorial services to the two martyred missionaries, who were graduated from the Institute in 1931 and 1932, Dr. Houghton declared the killings were a challenge to Christianity, and added he was sure the challenge would be met.

At the conclusion of the memorial services, at which Dr. Houghton presided, he asked for those who would volunteer for service in foreign lands. Electrified by the strong plea for a concrete answer to the martyrdom of the Stams, many in the crowded auditorium arose to their feet to dedicate themselves to missionary service. The picture above is of 21 present students who have China in view.

All High Schools in this State, located in cities or towns where there is a D.A.R. Chapter, are entitled to nominate a girl from their senior classes to represent Maine on a five-day pilgrimage to the historic and patriotic shrines of Washington, D. C. "Bermuda," the magic island that combines the tropics with rural England, was the subject of an intensely interesting and enjoyable talk given by Miss Heller to students of the Junior Business Training classes, Thursday, in correlation with their study of railroads, airplane, and steamship travel. Having just returned from a vacation trip to these islands, Miss Heller could give, in a vivid and enthusiastic manner, descriptions of the tropic color, the exhilarating sports, the white coral buildings, luxuriant gardens, the sands, and the sea. With no automobiles on the islands, trips were made through the countryside in pleasure carriages or on bicycles to magic caves, gardens, and the aquarium. Coupled with all this beauty were practical facts about tickets, baggage, traveler's cheques, customs officers, and the voyage made on the liner and airplane, and this combination of the aesthetic with the practical made Miss Heller's talk one of the most timely and helpful that has been given in this year's vocational guidance program. Margaret Davenport was pupil chairman of the occasion.

One of the finest and most practical talks was given Tuesday morning in assembly by Rev. Corwin Olds, pastor of the Congregational Church, when he spoke to the student body on "What a Business Man Expects of a High School Graduate." Having had many years of business experience, Mr. Olds spoke with authority on the requisites of employees, and forcibly brought out some points to be heeded in the education now being received for secular activities. He stressed the need of phrasing a sentence completely and pleasantly, proper spelling, and the necessity of retaining the elementary knowledge learned in the grades as well as in high school. "The business man has a right to expect," Mr. Olds said, "the High School graduate to know when to work and when to play. He must have an 'awakened intelligence' in that he is able to take the principles learned and apply them to new problems." In conclusion he said that the moral responsibilities in employment are of tremendous importance to one's self and to one's community, and that any career in any niche of society should be morally impeccable to insure happiness in this world. Vieno Kangas led devotional exercises and Robert Crane was pupil chairman of the assembly.

SERIOUS SALLIES

SALLY LOWE

A slip of the tongue is no fault of the mind, but a slip of the heel can be most unkind!

Graphic description of a vivid personality:

He was all the still quiet pools in the world, until he spoke. His words shimmered from an electrified mind in little hot flashes, which left one cold, then hot, then cold again! His limber body gave out a sound of clapping thunder under dry sheeting, then modulated into a metronomic tap, to burst forth with such smooth gentle chords toned white as the breast of a bird. His eyes carried little wavelets of laughter in their grey blue waters. He was tall and arrowlike, winged with a vision of clear crystal. Wherever he walked the air rang in peals of silver bells echoing from the towers of his mind!

If only 10 percent of the people of today are those really culturally interested in the furtherance of the arts, then what pray tell is to happen to all those in the coming generation who after becoming saturated mind and soul with the mechanical contrivances of a new refrigerator and the whirligig maneuvering of everyday life who find themselves empty with nothing but what ancestral posterity has left them? By that time no doubt there will be pawn shops on every corner, and life will be largely a hookshop itself!

I wonder do many of us realize how fortunate we are just to be out in the fresh air? By letter this morning from a New York artist I learned that along with the stagnation of gas fuming streets, the shrill cries of newboys until far into the night, the hose of the fire trucks spitting water on fresh fallen snow, the carols of all races and creeds demanding gluttenously for their rations of life, the skyscraping monuments of filth and money, there is so little real God given fresh air to breathe, so little chance to get away from the maelstrom of dejected hearts and faces worn bitter with remorse, so few opportunities to see the sun set on a high hill and a mountain standing like a lump of God by a sea of stars! There is much God . . . in the air!

"What do you really want to do? Have you done it? Why not? I thought you really wanted to do it! Nothing is so difficult, too obsolete, if the will you possess can sacrifice everything in order to get what you wish! It is oftentimes explained this way, shall we say . . . Either one is living in an active mood or a passive mood. If everything you ever wished just came to you then make up your mind that your choicest desire won't come that way. Why? Because people, life, the world in general is in too much of a hurry to let you be happy if they can go out and get what you want by a little slaving on their part. Competition is the spice of life! Do you want something? Others do too! Are you willing to fight? Then a happy heart goes with you . . . forever!"

There is never a smooth road which wasn't once a rocky one, or full of ruts and bumps. There is never a warm evening in June until the cold storms of March have passed. There is never a startling creation until after the designer has sketched and planned the creation. There is never a revelation in medicine until the years of study and surgical research have filled one man full of a desire cupped with the knowledge that there is an opening which hasn't been heard of and he must do it! There is never an ending without a beginning. There is never a top if there is no bottom! It is never too late to begin. Time is your weapon, not your guardian!

PLEA FOR CLUB ROOM

A Problem Which Many Have Realized, But Nobody Has Solved

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

We are proud of our fair city of Rockland by the sea, and admire its progressive spirit along all lines. It is the home of many organizations formed of women—members who take great interest and pride in civic welfare. Of the older clubs, the Methuesen, Shakespeare, Rubinstein, Twilight Literary Club, Educational Club, Sunshine and Speech Readers' Clubs, with the newer Garden and Poetry Clubs, are well known splendidly organized, and working on a solid basis for the special object each has in view.

Yes, we are a city of many fine clubs, possessed of much talent, and how are these clubs housed! There is no special place devoted to the interests of these organizations.

We recognize the need of a Community Club House, but in these times of depression realize the impossibility of erecting a grand building for that purpose. Sometimes necessity forces an issue. At present most of these clubs meet at individual homes, which is pleasant, but sometimes as in the case of Educational Club, this is not always convenient as this club has a large membership, and members are widely scattered.

There are many unused houses and rooms for rental in the city which might be leased for a normal sum. These could be renovated at a small cost, and made neat, comfortable and attractive, and placed at the disposal and use of different clubs, at a fair rental price. There are probably more such rooms than there are philanthropic people, but the situation presents a way for some public spirited citizen to enter into a "new deal."

Should a musical club desire the use of such rooms, there arises the need of a piano which is quite a big stumbling block, but there are many unused pianos in this city, that could be bought for a song, or donated.

And speaking of gifts, almost every house has a chair, desk, table or some article of furniture stored in the attic, as well as pictures, ornaments and other knick-knacks, no longer desired in the living rooms, which could be used in fitting up a pleasant and attractive abiding place for club life. In this connection I cite the gift of the late Mary Elmore Jackson to the town of Tenant's Harbor. As many Rockland people know, Nellie Jackson was a hopeless cripple for many years, and quite alone, as to near relatives in her last years. The writer of this article met her years ago, when she was at Knox Hospital and this acquaintance ripened into lasting friendship. At the time of her death about two years ago she left her residence to the town of Tenant's Harbor to be used as a Public Library, together with her own extensive library, the house to be renovated and made convenient as a home for the local pastor and family, who are to be custodians of the library. Through the interest and co-operation of the townspeople, the wish of Miss Jackson has been carried out.

The plan advocated in this writing-for-a-club-room may be but the dream of a visionary, who if she possessed a magic wand and fairy gold, would conjure a room to spring up all furnished, at the wave of a broomstick.

Alas! neither a witch, fairy god-mother, nor any other magical being has conceived this idea; it is but a plain thought that comes to one who is striving to find a way out of a situation that has become a problem to the Educational Club. How can the question "Where can our club meet?" be answered? The thought is submitted for consideration. It may not be feasible, yet it might appeal to some one possessed with a progressive spirit and executive ability who could work out the idea and prove it to be "A dream that came true." E. C. M.

Rockland, Feb. 25.

Beano was the major diversion of the evening and lunch was served by Mr. Kallach's daughter. The color scheme of table decorations was carried out in pink and silver, a large puzzle cake occupying the center, adorned by a silver star and flag with five small candles representing the five Star points. The cake was

SEEING FLORIDA ON A DOLLAR

Day by Day diary of Dick Reed of this city who is hitch-hiking around Florida, starting out from Miami with a dollar in his pocket for a ten-day trip. He is facing exciting adventure and life in the raw as he investigates the conditions that those who are stranded in Florida are facing as they beat their way back North. Ed. Note—Mr. Reed commenced this trip on Feb. 5, completing it at Daytona Beach, Feb. 15, and has since returned to this city.

Daytona Beach, Fla.—I am stopping in a 50 cent room on the third floor of a tenth rate hotel using a portable typewriter. I found me by a newspaperman who is also staying here. The truck driver treated me to breakfast for helping him with his papers. I came directly here and went to sleep. Tomorrow morning I will receive my clothes and then be off for more adventures via the most businesslike style of bumming, providing I can get 50 cents to pay for the room.

I did a little sightseeing this afternoon. At the Hotel Clarendon Garage I saw S. R. Malcolm Campbell's Bluebird, the racing car with which he hopes to speed down the sands of the beautiful beach at a 300 mile an hour clip.

It was cold and there were few bathers on the beach. As I walked down an avenue I sighted an orange tree and had my dinner. I don't think that I shall ever want to see another orange after this trip.

This city has four newspapers, two dailies and two weeklies. They are small affairs and are making heavy competition for each other. The business houses are up and coming and operate in most modern style.

I was surprised to learn that Daytona Beach is more of a summer resort than a winter playground. It gets quite cold in the winter but the summer climate is always cool and invigorating and attracts a large number of persons from the inland states.

The Chamber of Commerce is very active and an effort is being made to make the place a 12 month vacation spot. With that glorious climate down Miami way to compete with I am afraid that they will have a hard job.

This is more like St. Petersburg, attracting older persons. There are few young folks around and from what I can find out little activity and excitement for the younger blood.

Instead of horse and dog races, night clubs, sports and other of the more thrilling activities I noticed a group of middle aged persons playing shuffle board on the Municipal Courts and another group playing the perfectly exhausting game of lawn bowling. A ball is rolled down the court with little effort and the idea is to get your ball nearer a white ball than the other fellow. It is about as much exercise as a sunny afternoon in bed.

They are having an argument over auto licenses here and the bus system is tied up. The County wants the City to pay a license and the city doesn't want to do it. Meanwhile all but one bus has been tied up pending a decision.

Florida is a political hornet's nest. Everything is politics. You almost have to have a license to breathe and then another to exhale. It's a lot of fun seeing these things though and I hope that I won't offend any of the Florida folks who might read this when I say that except for that climate down Miami way I wouldn't swap a square inch of the State of Maine for a square mile of this sub-tropical province.

ELMER ALLEN'S CHAT

When They Kiddled the Local Band—How They Fooled the Gulls

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

When the Tenants Harbor Cornet Band was organized in the 80's, the members could play fairly well. William L. Allen was the E flat bass player, and worked in Booth Bros. store at Long Cove. There was a son of Italy working there at stone cutting—a mighty fine chap and very droll. His name was P. Notti. Anything he could say about the band to William in a joke seemed to please him immensely, so one day the always called him "Billie" he hallowed to him and said, "Billie, what's matter that Tenants Harbor Cornet Band? Can't play nutting only tiddy f. tiddy f. bum, bum bum. You fellows all bums I think."

Seeing the boys and girls enjoying their skills today took me back to the time when we boys used common barrel staves for the same purpose. The wider they were the better we thought. We used them mostly on a crusty surface. The Seavey field at Wild Cat was the best place as it was quite steep. We had great fun and took a good many spills, which produced skinned knees and shins. We were wearing copper-toed leather boots then. I wonder how the boys would like to wear them today. I remember one winter when I was clerking in Booth Brothers store at Long Cove. The roads were not plowed then as they are now. They used a triangle drawn by four, and sometimes six horses. This was slow work, nevertheless they did a good job. We had a very heavy snowstorm. It began about noon and lasted until the next morning, leaving two feet of snow on the level and drifted badly. I got out the two barrel staves and lashed them to my shoes and made the trip without much trouble.

Roy and I took a trip down to the shore one day last fall and went over on Cooper's ledges. The gulls were having a great time picking up mussels; at times one would grab one of these hard shell mussels and fly straight up in the air about 100 feet and drop it on a rock to break it. Sometimes they would have to do it a second time before it broke. A gull is a very knowing bird.

Roy said, "Did I ever tell you how I fooled one of those birds once?" I replied in the negative.

"I came down here once," said Roy, "and the gulls were doing just the same as they are now—cracking mussels. I had a rubber ball just the color of the mussels in my pocket, and waiting until a gull went into the air with her beakful, I threw the rubber ball. The bird picked up the ball instead of the mussel and went into the air and dropped it. Of course it did not break. Again the gull took it up to a great height and let it fall. The ball struck a flat rock and bounced right back and went clear through that bird like a bullet."

"That's a hard thing to believe, Roy," said I.

"Believe it or not. You ask J. K. he was with me. I kept this quiet because killing gulls is a Federal offense."

Radio Poll Challenges Academy Awards

Glancing over the program of Yehudi Menuhin which Mrs. Greene sent me, I note that he is using some of the Kreisler so-called "arrangements" which have caused such a tempest in the teapot since Fritz Kreisler has made the disclosure that he wrote a series of compositions in the style of the old masters like Vivaldi, Couperin, Porpora, Pugnani and Padre Martini, published them as his editions of their works, and for 30 years fooled fellow-violinists, critics, and the public into believing them authentic old classics. Zimbalist, Albert Spalding, Louis Persinger, Mischa Elman, Heifetz, and others of the great violinists are expressing their reactions—some favorable, some quite the reverse. It is noted with interest that young Yehudi prate Kreisler, speaking through his father, Moshe Menuhin, who said: "There is no question but that this is one of the most creditable things that Kreisler has done. He had to struggle in his early days and he did not want his name to appear perpetually on a program. Georges Enesco, Yehudi's friend, and recently his teacher, always praised these compositions and recommended that Yehudi study them, irrespective of their origin, because he considered them such excellent works."

Elman on the other hand says: "It is indeed a surprise that one who stands so high for that beautiful, pure, and true in art as Kreisler, should have resorted to such means in these so-called arrangements, which would take a high place of themselves, without his having to attribute his compositions to older sources, when these composers are unable to enjoy the plaudits or endure the criticisms which these compositions may or may not evoke."

The list of works which Mr. Kreisler has attributed to others, with the addition of the name Kreisler as editor and arranger, follows, with the names of the old composers to whom they have been credited, and they make interesting reading for the violinist and violin student:

Praeludium and Allegro, Concerto in G major, Allegretto in G minor, Andantino, Aubade Provencale, Chanson Louise XIII and Pavana, La Chasse, a Caprice, Menuet, La Preleuse, Couperin, Scherzo, Sicilienne and Rigaudon, Study on a Choral, Tempo di Minuetto, Pugnani Vivaldi, Porpora, Padre Martini, Couperin, Pugnani, Couperin, Dittersdorf, Francaeur, Stamitz, Fugneri.

Mr. Kreisler has this to say: "Every piece named in fact the entire series labeled 'classical manuscripts', are, in every detail, my original compositions, with the sole exception of the first eight bars of the Couperin Chanson Louise XIII, taken from a traditional melody," and goes on to explain his crediting the old masters with his own music:

"Necessity forced this course on me 30 years ago when I was desirous of enlarging my program. I found it inexpedient and tactless to repeat my name endlessly on the programs. Friends and publishers have presented other reasons, for example: three decades ago Mr. Kreisler was a young man of 30, and not the dominating figure before the public that he is today, and again, his colleagues would not have been eager in those days to play the work of a rival and rising virtuoso."

The actual authorship of these manuscripts was brought into the open as a result of the investigations by a writer and lecturer on music. An effort was made to discover what changes Mr. Kreisler had wrought in the Praeludium and Allegro, by Pugnani. An exhaustive search of printed music and manuscripts by Pugnani and in collections of his period, the second half of the 18th century, did not reveal the existence of the work. Finally with the consent of Kreisler, the publisher told all.

In any event, it all makes rare reading for the violin world, and there is a veritable battle on of "pros and cons". Leonard Kibling, editor of Musical Courier, in the Feb. 16th issue gives his readers an "earful" to fall back on the language of the day. He makes it distinctly understood that Mr. Kreisler in his opinion has made a tremendous faux pas. But then he has always had it in for Kreisler and Paderewski, why, we never have been quite able to understand. Have a sneaking idea, however, that he might find many thousands who still are convinced that both these artists are pretty well up the ladder, despite Mr. Kreisler's disclosures.

Radio lights for the coming week: March 2—Portland Symphony Orchestra, 11:30 p.m. with Virginia Le-Rae, coloratura soprano. Singing Una voce poco fa, from "The Barber of Seville," by Rossini. March 3—New York Philharmonic Orchestra, 3 p.m. program commemorating the 25th anniversary of the birth of Johann Sebastian Bach, on March 31, 1685. General Motors Hour, 8 to 9 p.m. Eugene Ormandy conducting symphony orchestra, and Tito Schipa, tenor, as soloist. March 6—Understanding Music, 6:30 p.m. Symphony No. 3, by Brahms. March 6—Curtis Institute of Music, 4:15 p.m. music of Robert Schuman in a program presented by pianists, violinist, violinist, contralto, and tenor. One of the pianists will be Cecile Geschichter who was heard in the Camden-Rockport Lions Club concert this past summer at Camden.

Edith Besse Greene, who is spending the winter in Watertown, Mass., writes:

"Yesterday I had such a very great treat in hearing two wonderful artists in Symphony Hall that I am sending the programs to you. Little Ruth Slenczynski surpassed even my wildest dreams. I never expect to hear anything so phenomenal again. Such a darling chubby little thing, with the stage presence and manners of a mature artist, and she is all of that. And yet to me she seemed younger than she is. If one closed their eyes, they could easily imagine they were listening to a strong man instead of a ten-year old girl. She chose for her encore the most difficult things. Her octave work was wonderful, and yet her hands looked so tiny as she threw kisses and waved good-bye to us when we all rushed out to catch a last glimpse of her as she took her taxi."

"I remained in town for the Symphony in the evening. Myra Hess played the Beethoven concerto (Concerto for Piano and Violin, Op. 4 in G major, Op. 58) so wonderfully. I have long admired her but I somehow felt it a mistake to hear two such great artists in one day."

"I've really had a feast of music this winter. Have heard Heifetz, Kreisler, and Menuhin. All are so wonderful, it is difficult to judge them."

In the same mail with Mrs. Greene's letter was another delightful one from Augusta Healey who now makes her home in Framingham, Mass. She, too, had just heard Little Ruth, enclosed a program, and had this to say:

"Her performance is almost unbelievable. Every number was just about perfect. I greatly enjoyed 32 Variations in C minor, by Beethoven, and Moment Musical F minor, Op. 94, No. 3, by Schubert, and the Nocturne and Sonata, by Chopin. The Concert Study composed by Ruth's father demonstrated her technique. Ruth was dressed in a simple white gown, white shoes and socks. She has heavy shiny brown hair, cut in a boyish bob. I was near the stage and could watch her hands closely. She was generous with her encores and was called back repeatedly. There was no person but Ruth, on the stage, but her father stood in the wings throughout her performance."

Glancing over the program of Yehudi Menuhin which Mrs. Greene sent me, I note that he is using some of the Kreisler so-called "arrangements" which have caused such a tempest in the teapot since Fritz Kreisler has made the disclosure that he wrote a series of compositions in the style of the old masters like Vivaldi, Couperin, Porpora, Pugnani and Padre Martini, published them as his editions of their works, and for 30 years fooled fellow-violinists, critics, and the public into believing them authentic old classics. Zimbalist, Albert Spalding, Louis Persinger, Mischa Elman, Heifetz, and others of the great violinists are expressing their reactions—some favorable, some quite the reverse. It is noted with interest that young Yehudi prate Kreisler, speaking through his father, Moshe Menuhin, who said: "There is no question but that this is one of the most creditable things that Kreisler has done. "Our winters in the lower districts are not severe, however, in the mountain region we have considerable snow and at that time the elk work down to the foot hills, where the snow is usually about two feet deep, in the district they feed on mountain laurel bunchgrass and do considerable broussing on the willows and different brush that is found in the draws and canyons in the lower area."

"When the snow in the lower districts disappears the elk move back with the snow, feeding on the new grass and vegetation, the different bands seem to work back to the same calving grounds each year usually about 4000 to 5000 feet elevation, usually the middle of May the cows scatter in the real heavy down timber and here they have their calves, when the young are still spotted they gather in the parks and meadows, by June 15, the cows have their young with them and are ready to move again to the higher areas, on the higher peaks and in the summit of the different ranges they stay feeding in the large parks and meadows until the heavy storms and snows drive them again to the lower districts."

"Regarding the damage done by elk in this district, the State of Washington does not pay any damages done by any of the game in the State. We do however make an effort to eliminate any damage that might take place, we have had some trouble at times with our elk during rare severe winters dropping in on some farmer's hay, this is not serious and can be easily handled by having in reserve a stake of hay in the vicinity where the elk might be bothersome, our troubles in this line have not been serious."

"It is my opinion that the Montana elk will adapt themselves in any State in the union if given a little protection especially from illegal killing. We believe the elk to be one of the grandest game animals in America and should be stocked in new country at every opportunity."

This frank letter suggests that we have been rather hasty. If Commissioner Stobie favors the acceptance and protection of the elk, we favor its trial. Such an opportunity may never come again.

MORAN'S ELK OFFER

Legislature May Reconsider Adverse Action—What a Warden Says

(Lewiston Journal)

We would not have anyone feel that by reason of a more or less facetious discussion of the elk, as an animal for the Maine woods we doubted or opposed the acceptance of Congressman Moran's offer to have a car-load shipped to Maine for domicile in or around the present land preserve in Katahdin. Indeed we see no reason why it may not be of vast importance.

As a matter of fact the bill providing for their protection and acceptance is on the table or possibly postponed, but we do believe it is not beyond resurrection.

We are certain that effort is to be made to revive the bill. To that end we publish herewith a letter which speaks for itself. It is authoritative being an official stationery of the State of Washington, Department of Fish and Game, and it speaks from actual experience of the writer and of the State of Washington; as follows:—

"Regarding the Yakima county elk herds. In 1913 we received from Yellowstone Park 57 head of elk, these elk were released in the foothills about 25 miles from Yakima, this location is the wintering grounds for our deer herds, this planting has been very successful and in 1927 we had a ten day open season on bulls only. We have continued this season each year up to the present time, from our check and the reports received from the Forest Service would indicate that the natural increase since 1927 has not been taken."

"I have spent considerable time with our elk throughout the different seasons and would say they are a wonderful game animal, during my 12 years with the game department in this district it has been my pleasure to be with our elk in the higher range as well as the foothills where they usually winter, on their breeding grounds, winter and summer range. I have seen deer in among them, on the game trails deer and elk sign is always in evidence."

"Our winters in the lower districts are not severe, however, in the mountain region we have considerable snow and at that time the elk work down to the foot hills, where the snow is usually about two feet deep, in the district they feed on mountain laurel bunchgrass and do considerable broussing on the willows and different brush that is found in the draws and canyons in the lower area."

DOWN NEW YORK WAY

By Dion E. Woolley

Conquerors come and conquerors go; and the mighty fall from high places. Changes still come in the twinkling of an eye, just as always. Last week this column told of the wonderful dexterity of the champion crossword puzzler, J. Van Cleft Cooper, and the championship contest scheduled for last Saturday.

The contest came off with a bang; a thousand participated in the elimination series for the privilege of entering the finals. This contest was won by a young 27-year-old radio mechanic of Brooklyn named Isidore Edelstein, who has been doing crossword puzzles daily for the past 15 years. This entitled him to compete against Mr. Cooper for the championship, and here again he won by the close margin of one minute and five seconds; the winning time was 3 minutes and 54 seconds. "It was a hard puzzle, but a fair one," said Mr. Cooper who took his defeat philosophically and earnestly congratulated his successor. Now we would like to see some of The Courier-Gazette puzzlers practice up and enter the next championship contest, two or three years hence.

This contest was held as a feature of the three day convention of the National Puzzlers League holding forth at the Hotel New Yorker where the organization adopted a new tongue twisting 45 letter almost unpronounceable word as the official long word of the association. Here it is: Pneumonoultramicroscopicsilicovolcanokoniosis. Did you make it?

And another recent hero has taken a fall. The stars of defeat appear to be in the ascendancy. Our hero of only a few weeks ago, the honest and watch sign man who found $46,000. worth of bonds in Wall street and returned them to the owners, and was modestly rewarded, has found the mental strain of resultant prosperity too great. Unaccustomed to rich food and a new mode of living, Frank Grege's mind succumbed, and he was taken to the psychopathic ward of Bellevue Hospital for treatment, after having spread terror through a Bowery hotel while laboring under delusions of grandeur; and the belief that he had become a deity possessing the power to kill any upon whom he gazed. Psychiatrists believe, however, that he may recover his equilibrium and be restored to his former normal condition. There is in this little experience a moral which suggests that sudden affluence does not always bring anticipated content and happiness.

As if two falls in one day were not sufficient, Civic Fame, the beautiful gilded 20 foot Grecian statue atop the Municipal Building tower, 550 feet above the street, dropped her right arm, shield and escutcheon, without any reasonable reason unless she was tired out in appealing so many years for peace and justice.

Fortunately the 150 pound section and possessions was stopped in its downward course at the 28th floor, crashing onto the skylight over the cafeteria used by municipal employes. The last diners had departed just a few minutes before it happened and no one was injured, but the handsome Grecian started a commotion greater than any in all the years of her admonishing administration.

Maine's handsome, silver toned crooner extraordinary, Rudy Vallee, emerged from his recent matrimonial melee, quite triumphantly, and the reading and listening public is hoping it may be the grand finale of his amorous exploits. It is said, however, that he is not the great lover his admirers imagine him to be. He possesses many real substantial qualities which have helped him in holding his public. He has a stubborn determination, does not give in easily and does not permit any one to override him, and is steadfast to his ambitions. Rudy intends to keep his place in the front ranks of his profession and likes to work out his own ideas. So croon lovers may look forward to a peaceful continuance of his very special style of entertainment.

From the Beginning Shorthand class comes the news this week that Eva Sclar, Virginia Brown, Marie Begin, and Dorothy Lamoin, have passed their official 60 word Gregg Test.
